Urban Wildland Interface Communities
Within the Vicinity of Federal Lands That
Are at High Risk From Wildfire; Notice

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE*Forest Service*DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR*Bureau of Indian Affairs*Bureau of Land Management*Fish and Wildlife Service*National Park Service*Urban Wildland Interface Communities Within the Vicinity of Federal Lands That Are at High Risk From Wildfire

AGENCIES: Forest Service, Department of Agriculture; Bureau of Indian Affairs, Bureau of Land Management, Fish and Wildlife Service, and National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: This notice provides an update to the initial list of urban wildland interface communities in the vicinity of Federal lands that are at high risk from wildfire published in the Federal Register on January 4, 2001. Pursuant to Congressional direction, this updated list indicates those communities for which the Secretaries have ongoing projects, and this notice identifies reasons why treatments are not planned or ongoing in the remaining communities in FY 2001.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Dick Bahr, Fire Management Program Center, National Park Service, USDI, 3833 S. Development Avenue, Boise, Idaho 83705-5354, (208) 387-5217 (e-mail: dick_bahr@nps.gov); or Janet Anderson Tyler, USDA Forest Service, Attn: Fire and Aviation Management, Yates Bldg., 201 14th Street, SW., Washington, DC 20024, (202) 205-1494 (e-mail: janderson03@fs.fed.us). Information specific to individual State listings should be directed to the respective State Foresters as listed with the National Association of State Foresters (NASF), 444 N. Capitol St., NW., Suite 540, Washington, DC 20001, or electronically from the NASF World Wide Web/Internet home page at <http://www.stateforesters.org/SFlist.html>.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The initial list of urban wildland interface communities, published in the Federal Register on January 4, 2001 (66 FR 751), was prepared in accordance with Title IV of the FY 2001 Appropriations Act for the Department of Interior and Related Agencies (Pub. L. 106-291). The list was compiled from preliminary information provided by the States and Tribes and was prepared for publication by the Secretaries of Agriculture and the Interior. The information in the updated list set out at the end of this notice was compiled at the State and/or Tribal level by collaborative interagency groups. As a result of this collaborative effort, the Secretaries have prepared a more complete list that better reflects the relationship between Federal lands and the urban wildland interface problem in the United States. This annotated list supersedes the list published in the Federal Register on January 4, 2001 (66 FR 751).

It is important to note that the urban wildland interface is not limited to communities in the vicinity of Federal land. Many States, particularly in the East, submitted revised community lists that included all interface communities in their State, regardless of their relationship to Federal land. These States felt strongly that the full, nationwide scope of the urban wildland interface problem must be conveyed.

Due to the specificity of Congressional direction, the list set out at the end of this notice contains only those communities identified by the States or Tribes as "in the vicinity of Federal land."

A list of all the interface communities submitted by the States and Tribes is available from the National Association of State Foresters (NASF). Please see the FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT section above for the NASF website and other contact information.

The Federal agencies do not now plan to publish any subsequent lists in the Federal Register, but the interagency teams that developed the list published with this notice will update the community lists in each State as necessary.

Prior to revising the list of communities previously published in the Federal Register on January 4, 2001 (66 FR 751), an interagency group at the national level established a consistent process to be used by local land managers in reviewing each State's or Tribe's initial community list. This process was designed to lead interagency groups through an analysis of the communities in their State, including a description of the risk factors associated with each community and identification of Federal lands in the vicinity of the community.

The process outlined provided the flexibility for State teams to use existing community assessment systems when those systems met or exceeded the standardized process. State-level groups also retain the right to prioritize subsequent hazard reduction efforts according to local goals and opportunities. Although this State-level flexibility has resulted in some variance among State submissions, the Secretaries feel the application of a standardized process has resulted in greater nationwide consistency for the revised lists.

The information contained in the list set out at the end of this notice will be used by interagency groups of land managers at the State and/or Tribal level to collaboratively identify priority areas within their jurisdictions that would benefit from hazard reduction activity. This will ensure that available funding is focused on areas of local importance and where opportunities are most conducive to reducing risks on a meaningful scale.

As described above, the list includes only those communities in the vicinity of lands managed by the Federal Government, especially the Departments of Agriculture and the Interior. This list is annotated to identify those communities around which the Secretaries have ongoing hazardous fuel reduction treatments or plan to begin treatments in FY 2001. These treatments will be focused primarily on Federal lands in the urban wildland interface and on nearby tribal and non-Federal lands where the landowner is a willing participant. All treatments will be subject to review for conformance with applicable laws, as addressed in the report accompanying the FY 2001 Appropriations Act for the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies (Pub. L. 106-291).

Of the 11,376 communities contained in the revised list, 9,457 communities are near Federal lands managed by the Departments of Agriculture and the Interior. The remaining 2,007 communities are near lands managed by other Federal agencies.<sup>1</sup> Of the total 11,376 communities, 9,600 have no hazardous fuels reduction treatments ongoing or planned for implementation in fiscal year 2001. The primary reasons for the lack of treatments around these communities are as follows:

- Planning Requirements: The Federal agencies, working with their State, Tribal and local partners, must accurately assess the level of wildfire risk and types and extent of treatments required to mitigate this risk. Interagency/Tribal groups working at the state level are in the process of defining projects that will significantly reduce the threat of wildfire to the highest-risk communities, and setting priorities for treatments in FY 2002. This collaborative planning process for large, multi-jurisdictional projects, potentially affecting many diverse resource components, cannot be completed quickly. The completion of Federally mandated planning, consultation, and environmental compliance activities for projects associated with the large number of communities remaining to be addressed will require significant time and effort. The Federal agencies, working with their State, Tribal, and local partners, must accurately assess the level of wildfire risk and types and extent of treatments required to mitigate this risk. In some cases, this may require revising land management plans and preparing new environmental assessments or environmental impact statements. The Secretaries are beginning to increase staff and contracting capabilities to address this issue. In order to achieve significant results within a reasonable time period, the Federal agencies and their partners must balance the allocation of available funding between planning future projects and implementing those that are ready now. Most projects planned for implementation in FY 2001 were begun two years prior to the National Fire Plan publication, and do not necessarily reflect the emphasis on treatment for urban wildland interface communities. Projects in FY 2002 and beyond will more closely address wildfire risk associated with the list of communities in this notice.

- Community Awareness and Support: The States, Federal agencies, and Tribes are working with many communities to build an awareness of wildfire risk in the urban wildland interface, and to educate homeowners and stakeholders about effective steps that should be taken to mitigate this risk. In many areas, multiple land ownerships and jurisdictions have made it difficult for all parties to agree on a course of action. In some cases, further effort is required to obtain agreement on the types of treatments that will result in acceptable impacts as well as hazard mitigation. The Secretaries believe that these problems must be resolved at the local level, working with all interested parties and applying the best available science. The collaborative interagency groups that developed the community lists will continue to work with local communities to define risk reduction projects that will result in significant positive impacts within acceptable time frames.

- Lack of Implementation Capability: On-the-ground implementation of fuel reduction projects around urban wildland interface communities will require a trained and available workforce, not only to implement project prescriptions, but also to assist communities with utilization or disposal of removed vegetative materials. Pursuant to Congressional direction, the Secretaries will seek to engage local workers and businesses in implementing these efforts. In many areas, these local resources will need time and assistance in preparing for this opportunity; program effectiveness will likely improve over time once stability and trust is built with local partners. Federal and State agencies will also need to develop trained personnel to facilitate the contracting requirements associated with the implementation of hazardous fuel reduction projects.

- Additional Funding Needs: Funding continuity in future years will be needed to continue to address the needs of communities in the urban wildland interface. The Secretaries will evaluate their needs based on information from the 2001 implementation process, including the scope and progress made, and will keep Congress and the Administration apprized as the full extent of funding needs is determined.

- Federal Role: The Federal government will prioritize projects where the wildfire threat is clearly coming from Federal land. In cases where there are wide buffers of State and private land between a community and Federal land, the agencies will work with local partners to determine how best to fund projects when private or State lands are an equal or greater factor contributing to the wildfire risk of a community. As discussed under "Planning Requirements," the interagency/Tribal groups at the State level are in the process of defining projects and will consider a variety of factors in setting priorities for treatments in 2002.

The updated list of urban wildland interface communities in the vicinity of Federal lands at high risk from wildfire is set out at the end of this notice.
